

Language
that cares

Simple language toolkit

Support for practitioners to have important conversations with children and young people

Why is language important?

Leicestershire's Children In Care Council has worked together with practitioners to gather the voice of children and young people in care.

In Spring 2023 a structured conversation was used to talk to children and young people about language. We learned that:

- Language matters to our children
- It is important to use simple and plain language to help our children understand what is happening around them when they are in care – KEEP IT SIMPLE!
- Jargon and abbreviations must be avoided – this can leave children confused.
- Language needs to be adapted based on a child's age and length of time in care.
- Every child will have a different view of what language works for them – ONE size does not fit all children.
- Children do not want to keep repeating important messages to new practitioners – we need to capture their views in ways that it is central to their plan.

Many children under the age of 18 years prefer to be called a young person. Whilst respecting their views, it is important we do not 'adultify' children unnecessarily. For the purpose of this document, the word child should be taken to include young people.

The most important message from our children and young people is that they must be treated as an individual.

How can this toolkit help practitioners?

- This toolkit will help to support practitioners to have important conversations with children and young people. It will give ideas about some of the important words that you may take for granted – but which may confuse or upset children.
- It will help form the basis of regular conversations to get updates about the words that are important to describe each child's journey when they are looked after.
- It will help you to keep records in a way that the child will understand and help them to make sense of the important processes that are in place to make sure that being looked after is a positive experience for them.
- It will provide alternatives for some of the key words that are used in looked after system – but this is not exhaustive – it should prompt your conversation - not restrict it.
- Children must be able to explore and inform the language we use to capture their story.
- The highlighted words in the glossary are the words that young people locally and nationally have told us matter to them most.

How do we make language count for all our children and young people?

Every child has a plan that sets out what is important for them – the Care Plan. The plan will include some key words that matter to the child.

The child's review meeting will ensure that language has been explored with the child and the plan captures their up-to-date views.

We will always include what has been agreed with the child to record:

- What they call the place they are living.
- What they call their carers.
- What they call the time they spend with their family.
- Any other important language or words the child/young people would prefer us to use.

A worker will always talk to the child in preparation for their review meeting. The care plan section 'This is who I am' will include the child's chosen words and this will be confirmed as part of the review process.

A worker will need to be familiar with a young person's form of communication if they do not use speech given their disability needs. Their voice will need to be captured and shared using alternative forms of communication such as Makaton, BSL, PEC's, communication board, speech generated devices or communication apps. Children and young people's behaviour and social presentation is also a non-verbal form of communication can also indicate preferences, likes and dislikes, pain or trauma.

This will be for all children over 10 but for some younger child this could be included based on the initial conversation.

The 3-month updated can be used to confirm the child's chosen words so that these are visible easily on the file.

Some bottom lines from our children

- Don't use acronyms or abbreviations that we may not understand.
- We will always have agreed the language and wording that our workers use when they are supporting and working directly with us.
- Workers will always check our understanding of language and words, particularly when supporting us in meetings with other services and professionals.
- Our preferred language and words will be recorded and shared with all workers who support us.
- Sometimes our circumstances and feelings may change. Our choice of language and words will be reviewed and changed as needed.
- We will not have to keep reminding workers about our preferred language and words.
- We should not have to explain our choice of language and words.
